So far I have come through with the refactoring, however I am struggling with a behavior that is now breaking, but used to work fine. As part of the refactoring I have extended the org.springframework.jdbc.datasource.embedded.EmbeddedDatabaseType, so that instead of a SQLServer database I am now using an H2 database. However, this new type does not seem to be properly configured, and does not behave as expected. The error I am getting in my logs is that it tries to instantiate a SQLServerDatabaseType instead of the H2DatabaseType I defined. For this reason I am currently getting the following exception:
org.springframework.beans.factory.BeanCreationException: Error creating bean with name 'mysqlDataSource' defined in class path resource [org.springframework.boot.autoconfigure/jdbc/DataSourceConfiguration$Tomcat.class]: Invocation of init method failed; nested exception is java.lang.IllegalStateException: Cannot resolve database type for 'SOURCE'. Ensure that the database exists and has the required schema. at org.springframework.beans.factory.support.AbstractAutowireCapableBeanFactory.initial
